AN OHIO TRAGEDY.
Special Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.
COLUMBUS, O., July 12.—The city was thrown into the wildest excitement to-day as the report spread of the murder of a prominent banker.

Five minutes after the shooting took place hundreds of excited people blocked up the street in front of the bank. On entering the office a horrible sight met the eyes of the men and women, lying at full length, was Mr. Rickley, his face, hair, and whiskers filled with clotted blood, and the victim moaning half unconsciously in agony. The man who had fired the fatal shot, upon the fore body of Andrew Eichenberg, cold in death, while lightly grasped in his right hand was the instrument of death, a Smith & Wesson .38-caliber revolver.

The circumstances which culminated in the tragedy to-day may be stated as follows: Eichenberg carried on a clothes-cleaning and dyeing business in the second-story room of a building numbered 100 on Broadway, and several hundred dollars, which he saved from his business, he deposited in Rickley's bank. The panic came on and the bank collapsed, owing to heavy losses sustained by the failure of Jay Cooke & Co., and his $100,000 was paid out of the bank's capital. Indebtedness, but it is thought about $500,000 were due Eichenberg. This morning the latter, after having deposited his money in the bank, took some security that was not regarded as good. He then proceeded to Rickley's bank. The cashier, who was not present, was called. When he was heard by the Cashier, who was in the back room, and, when Rickley said, "I cannot give you any more money," he said, "I will give you as much as the Cashier, a son of the President, rushed into the bank, and, without any further delay, where his father had fallen. Eichenberg, after firing, passed into the rear room, and, finding that he had not been followed, went to the front, and, not knowing any other persons in the bank, he went to the cashier's office, leading behind the counter, when he discovered the presence of the Cashier. The assassin turned on him, and, without any further delay, he took of the weapon in his temple and pulled the trigger.

fell as though struck by lightning. He moved a muscle or uttered a gasp. It appeared bloodied and bruised. He was taken to the back room for the purpose of getting access to his victim, who instantly fainted. The man was taken to the hospital on finding his victim was not alone. Mr. Hickley, who was on duty, said the victim's wounds were dressed. The ball entered directly above the right eye, lodging below the left. Fingers and thumb were severed. The wound and the wound is not considered necessarily fatal, but it is feared the victim may be recovered. The right of one eye will be destroyed, perhaps both.

Two months ago the bank was robbed by three professionals, and the safe relieved of upwards of $30,000 in bonds and currency. No one was injured. It is thought that the same men were responsible for the robbery. It has been rumored to the effect that there was something very mysterious surrounding the affair.

RIOTOUS STRIKERS.

ARCHBOLD, Kas., July 13.—C. H. Peck, contractor, who has been building a new house for J. M. Smith, at East Archbold, Mo., having engaged several colored men to pay $1.25 per day, a drunken man armed with several men and their appearance was so threatening that the white men were sent out. From there they crossed into ing, they proceeded to the brick-yard of Seith & Co., where seven colored men were employed. They demanded the suspension of all work, and drove the colored men from the premises. They then numbered about a hundred, and was addressed by the Mayor of Atchison-and others, urging peace and order, and that the colored men should return to their farms were compelled to turn back over the bridges, and the other parks in town were closed. The mob and other rascals in town were hunted up and sent over into Kansas. The efforts to quiet the mob were useless, and telegraphed to Sheriff Spencer, of St. Joseph, to come, and exercise his authority, and to come. The mob now have possession of Eastern Kansas, and are terrorizing the colored people of Atchison, who are largely interested in industries, are indignant at the disgraceful conduct of the Governor, and are determined to guard Missouri, do their duty by to-morrow they propose to take a hand in the business.

MURDERED AN OFFICER.
Special Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.
Dressed in his uniform, at about seven o'clock evening Peter Scanlan, a Constable, attempted to arrest August Wunderlick, a German laborer, known for assaulting his wife. The officer went to him near the foot of Madison street, at the house, searched the bank of the river and found him lying in the bottom of his boat. As he jumped into the skiff, the jar forced the boat into the river, and the constable was obliged to follow it. He tried to catch some distance Wunderlick drew a revolver and threw his body into the river. The murderer then came to the city, and next morning the river was found to be empty. Peter Scanlan was found this morning. A posse of men armed to the teeth have started in search of the black, and it will be caught before long from the first tree.

FATALLY SHOT.
Special Dispatch to The Chicago Tribune.

GORDON, Ont., July 13.—This morning a dispute between two men resulted in the death of a Rover, lying in the harbor, between John O'Heirne, first mate, and Thomas Sheridan, second mate. During the melee Sheridan fired a revolver twice at O'Heirne, who was seriously wounded, one leg being long in his neck, the other in the right arm. Medical assistance was at once sent for, but it was too late. The body of O'Heirne was voluntarily gave himself up to the authorities, and now lies in jail. O'Heirne will probably die.

An English vessel, engaged in the Euxine and Gulf of Persia trade, was recently attacked by a band of Arabians. The master and one of the crew were killed, but the assailants did not succeed in boarding the vessel.

FURTHER returns from the country towns give Cook County a population of 65,333. The village of Hyde Park has a population of 15,724, no insignificant figure for a village. But Hyde Parkers, like Chicagoans, are modest.

BALTIMORE's selection as Chairman of the Democratic National Committee is said to have been done at the dictation of Tilden. The rejection of Wallace is regarded as an insult to the Democrats, for they have no hopes of carrying Pennsylvania.

MORE than 1,300 common-law criminals and about 400 convicts have been pardoned, or have had their sentences commuted, by President Greely. A transport ship will be sent to New Caledonia to take the political convicts of that colony to France.

Democratic newspapers are compelled to admit that the letter is a forcible, statesmanlike, and excellent exposition of popular political principles, and the most explicit criticism of the platform on which Gen. Hancock stands.

OS and after Oct. 1 no cards will be passed through the mails except the Government post-cards. This order is rendered necessary by a practice which has grown up of late of sending advertising cards, with one-cent stamp attached through the Post-Office.

A SAILOR belonging to a craft trading between New Orleans and New Orleans, who was at the latter city Sunday of yellow fever. No new cases have occurred since, and it is the opinion of the health officers that all danger has been removed by the prompt measures taken.

SENATOR CAMPBELL has not had good luck in distributing the official patronage in his district. Last spring the term of Mr. John Naro, Collector of the Port, expired, and Mr. Carpenter desired the appointment of Mr. John Naro. But Mr. Naro decided to continue Mr. Naro in the office for the good and sufficient reason he had proved to be a thorough and acceptable officer. His name was sent to the Senate for confirmation, but Mr. Carpenter's influence with the Democratic Senators was sufficient to have it rejected. Mr. A. W. Hall, who has been the popular Deputy for some time, has now been appointed, and the appointment will give entire satisfaction to all except Mr. Carpenter and his followers. The President has far surpassed another evidence of his intention to respect the professions of the Republican party for a wholesome reform in the Civil Service.

GEN. GARFIELD'S LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.
 Our readers have already recognized in the letter of Gen. Garfield the evidence of the experienced statesman writing upon subjects with which he is intimately familiar and in which he has been closely identified. Never, perhaps, since the candidacy of John Quincy Adams has there been a candidate so thoroughly experienced as a publicist, and so personally identified with the legislation of the Government, and at the same time so able to understand and to discriminate the condition of National affairs, as Gen. Garfield.

In the short space of his letter he has distinctly and comprehensively defined the policy and principles of the party of which he is the leader, and the policy and principles with which his whole public life has been identified, and to which he proposes to adhere in the future, and especially if he be elected President. To him none of these questions are new. As a student and a scholar he has considered them thoroughly; and as a legislator with a practical experience of continuous service during the whole period covered by the war, by the years of reconstruction, and of the long and arduous campaign of the Reconstruction era, he has seen the growth of the Nation in controversy, he is thoroughly conversant with the questions of which he treats. Therefore it is that his letter discusses directly and clearly the issues which divide the two great parties. It is in no particular degree an address, but rather a statement of the policy and principles of the party of which he is the leader, and the policy and principles with which his whole public life has been identified, and to which he proposes to adhere in the future, and especially if he be elected President.

The testimony of men like Gen. P. H. Sheridan, Gen. George H. Thomas, and Gen. Reynolds is in direct conflict with that of Gen. Hancock as to the condition of Southern loyalty and Southern sentiment. Hancock's book command at New Orleans. All these gentlemen spoke from actual and personal observation; Hancock merely parroted the language of Andy Johnson under instructions from the latter. Gen. Sheridan, Thomas, and Reynolds were not political commanders. They had not been sent to the South to order anybody's policy, but to see that the laws of the Nation were enforced, and that the rights of life and property from assault on account of race or Union sentiments. They had personal knowledge of the lawlessness and viciousness of a certain portion of the Rebel community, which was condoned and encouraged by the other portion. They had learned by experience that the laws of the Nation were not enforced, and that the rights of life and property from assault on account of race or Union sentiments. They had personal knowledge of the lawlessness and viciousness of a certain portion of the Rebel community, which was condoned and encouraged by the other portion.

thinking, and that he will carry with him to the Presidency all those qualities and all the scholarship and experience which mark him as the leading statesman of the country at this time.

GEN. HANCOCK AT NEW ORLEANS.
 Immediately upon his arrival in New Orleans, in the latter part of 1867, Gen. Hancock proclaimed in a general order that peace and quiet rules in the future. The Department included the States of Louisiana and Texas. There are other witnesses, entitled to fully as much credit as Gen. Hancock for judgment and sincerity, who testified to a very different state of things in Texas and other Southern States during the same period. We submit a few opinions in regard to the "peace and quiet" prevailing in the South.

The condition of freedom and Union men in remote parts of Texas is truly horrible. The Government and Southern, the freedmen are shot, and Union men are persecuted if they have the temerity to express their opinion. This condition exists in the Northern States of the State to an alarming extent. Apportionment of troops; but troops have so little power that they are efficient only in the effect which their presence has—Gen. Sheridan, 1867.

The civil law east of Trinity River is almost a dead letter. The counties the civil officers are all or a portion of them members of the Democratic Club. An attorney at law, who has been elected to the office of the State to an alarming extent. Apportionment of troops; but troops have so little power that they are efficient only in the effect which their presence has—Gen. Sheridan, 1867.

The history of Texas is a people full of war. The necessity for keeping troops in the late insurrectionary States. His military and Southern, the freedmen are shot, and Union men are persecuted if they have the temerity to express their opinion. This condition exists in the Northern States of the State to an alarming extent. Apportionment of troops; but troops have so little power that they are efficient only in the effect which their presence has—Gen. Sheridan, 1867.

The Clerical Victories in London Telegrams. The result of the election was not so much a surprise as it was a success. The clerical element, and there is but what some poverty-stricken element as soon as the scheme comes to the point of execution.

Something like a victory in the election of the House of Commons. The result of the election was not so much a surprise as it was a success. The clerical element, and there is but what some poverty-stricken element as soon as the scheme comes to the point of execution.
